

Continue

Why did lance leave maine cabin masters

Lance Gatcomb's exit in Maine Cabin Masters has been shrouded in mystery. Maine Cabin Masters is a reality TV series from the Magnolia Network that follows a team of Maine-based homebuilders as they transform desolate cabins into modern, much-improved versions. One of the mainstay homebuilders in the first two seasons is Lance Gatcomb. Aside from his expert knowledge in the world of construction, Lance became a fan-favorite due to his comedic chops and charismatic personality. Lance's Exit in Maine Cabin Masters Explained Lance GatcombLance Gatcomb left Maine Cabin Masters after Season 3, but his exit was not thoroughly explained. The fact that Lance also does not have social media made it difficult to get any official statement from him. Despite that, there was a hint as to why Lance had to exit the show in Season 2. In Maine Cabin Masters Season 2, Episode 16, Lance mentioned that he was leaving the series due to the birth of his "little boy" while he also admitted that it was a bittersweet moment for him: "I got a couple of surprises for you guys. One's bittersweet. I think it's gonna be my last year. We're having a little boy... So, I'm gonna be raising a little boy next summer."Lance continued by saying that raising a family was his utmost priority, noting that he would be busy raising his son while also juggling responsibilities with his farm: "You know, it's been a great couple years. We've done a lot of stuff. Put 27 cabins back together. Love working with the guys, love doing all this stuff. I'm at a point right now in my life where I'm gonna raise a family. And between child-rearing and farming, I'm not gonna have time to do this anymore." Still, the Maine Cabin Masters mainstay was hopeful then that he would be given a chance to come back:"So, hopefully, I'll get some time to come back, but as it stands, I'm gonna start raising a family."Lance eventually made a brief guest appearance in Maine Cabin Masters Season 3, Episode 2, "Paws, Present, and Future," in December 2018. During the episode, he helped the crew build some cat pens for their current project. Lance's appearance proved that he could still be a reliable recruit even though he left the show. For fans wanting to learn more about Lance after his exit from Maine Cabin Masters, the cabin builder still posts new videos on his YouTube channel (Lance Gatcomb). Some of his videos include the demolition of his old farmhouse and repairing issues at his house. Maine Cabin Masters is available to stream on Discovery+ and Max. - Follow Follow Follow Follow By Leila KozmaUpdated March 25 2020, 3:15 p.m. ETSource: InstagramMaine Cabin Masters offers a rare glimpse into the everyday life of a tightly-knit group of Maine-based homebuilders, charting how Chase Morrill, Lance Gatcomb, and Jared "Jedi" Baker tackle construction work-related challenges and beyond. In the course of the past four seasons, we watched the illustrious crew transform some of the most desolate cabins into modernist sensations. However, as some eagle-eyed viewers have spotted, one crew member vanished from the show. So, what happened to Lance? Article continues below advertisementAs the first episodes of the Maine Cabin Masters reveal, Lance used to be a core member of the quirky team. However, this all changed in Season 4. Fans would very much like to know — what's the reason behind Lance's mysterious disappearance? Source: InstagramArticle continues below advertisementA fantastic showman, Lance stole fans' hearts with a range of chuckle-some tricks. In one episode, he set out to make doughnuts in a motorboat while the rest of the crew was busy pouring their every might into finishing a cabin. In another, he cozied up in a hammock with a bag of Cheetos — proving once again that he has everything it takes to become a reality TV show star. "That's really how he rolls," Chase confirmed in a previous interview with Down East.As a clip posted on the Maine Cabin Masters Facebook page reveals, Lance's life isn't all about fun. According to the video, he built a house for himself just as staggeringly beautiful as the ones commissioned by the clients. An avid fan of everything nature- and wildlife-related, he even populated "Lance-land" with dozens of ducks, chickens, and the like. Article continues below advertisement"A Cabin For the Bride" offered a rare glimpse into another aspect of Lance's private life, capturing his and Lily's wedding ceremony. The 2016 episode marked a new beginning for the incredibly relatable construction worker and his romantic partner. Article continues below advertisementUnfortunately for fans, Lance's current whereabouts are shrouded in secrecy. He doesn't have an Instagram or a Twitter account, which makes it all the harder for those eager to track him down and learn more about what he had been up to since leaving the show. Even worse, he hasn't posted on Facebook since 2013 — putting an end to his career on social media with a post about a fetching sailboat. Source: TwitterArticle continues below advertisementLance's abrupt departure from Maine Cabin Masters left fans devastated. "I hate it that Lance "I'm coming for you sweetheart" left the show. He was always good for some comedy relief," tweeted a fan. "Brad is such a great addition to MCM! That being said, definitely miss seeing good ole Lance in every episode. @DIYNetwork, can't we have them both? Love all the Maine Cabin Masters! You're all terrific," opined another. "Please, want to see more of Lance, Ashley, and Chase on #maine cabin masters, a little less ryan@DIYNetwork," wrote another person. Catch new episodes of Maine Cabin Masters every Monday at 9 p.m. ET on DIY Network. Latest Entertainment News and Updates Maine Cabin Masters, a reality TV show on the DIY Network, has gained popularity with its blend of rustic charm, innovative cabin renovations, and the camaraderie of its cast. The series follows a team of builders, led by Chase Morrill, as they restore and renovate old cabins in the beautiful wilderness of Maine. Among cast members like Chase Morrill, Lance Gatcomb, and Jared Baker, Lance easily stood out for his quirky personality and memorable on-screen moments. However, fans were left puzzled when Lance suddenly departed from the show in 2020 never to return since. Now they're left wondering what happened to him, and why he left Maine Cabin Masters. Lance Gatcomb joined the cast of Maine Cabin Masters early in the show's run. He was not only a builder, but also played the role of comic relief, often lightening the mood with his antics and offbeat humor. Lance is married to Lily Gatcomb, and the two have one child together. In a video posted by Maine Cabin Masters on Facebook, he was shown to have built a beautiful house for himself, filling it with ducks, chickens, and other wildlife. Altogether, from 2016 to 2020, Lance was featured in 37 episodes of Maine Cabin Masters. His presence added a unique flavor to the show, making his departure even more noticeable. What happened to Lance and why did he leave Maine Cabin Masters? When season 4 of the show premiered in December 2019, Lance was notably absent. Despite this, the comical builder had garnered a loyal following thanks to his spontaneous and unpredictable on-screen persona. That's why it's no surprise that his abrupt departure left fans confused and sad. Surprisingly, the production team never issued an official statement explaining Gatcomb's absence, so we're left with little to go on. It's worthy to note that Lance is known to be a private individual. He has always been someone who appreciates a simpler, quieter life, closer to nature and away from the hustle and bustle of the entertainment industry. So, it is not shocking that many sources speculated he left the show for personal reasons. While some fans took it upon themselves to uncover more about Lance's whereabouts, his private lifestyle made it very hard for them. He doesn't have an Instagram or an X (formally Twitter) account, and he hasn't posted on Facebook since 2013. However, Lance seems to have found a place for himself on YouTube. He started a channel in September 2020, and as of now, has gained over 2.1k subscribers. His most recent video (shown above) was posted 10 months ago in July 2023 and consisted of him installing a window in his log cabin. Evidently, the former reality star seems to be doing well for himself and his family. Fans of Main Cabin Masters have expressed a mix of emotions regarding Lance's departure. Many miss his quirky humor and the joy he brought to the series, while others understand and respect his decision to leave. Social media platforms and fan forums have seen him showered with an outpouring of support, with viewers wishing him well in his future endeavors and hoping for occasional updates on his life. We Got This Covered is supported by our audience. When you purchase through links on our site, we may earn a small affiliate commission. Learn more about our Affiliate Policy Hit DIY series Maine Cabin Masters came to our screens just over a few years ago, with fans already attracted to its lovable cast and sold on the show's engaging concept and miraculously low-budget projects. Spearheaded by Chase Morrill, Jared "Jedi" Baker, and Lance Gatcomb, Maine Cabin Masters, interestingly took viewers through a rare glimpse of the everyday life of the group of homebuilders. For four seasons, fans got attached to the tightly knit group and their illustrious teamwork, transforming desolate cabins into charming homes. However, in its last season, team dynamics changed when Lance Gatcomb disappeared from the show. Upbeat and comedic Lance Gatcomb could be described as the cherry on top of the quirky team of professional builders who shared fun chemistry between them while tackling construction work-related challenges. Lance added dimension to the show for doing the most unexpected yet laughable things. For instance, in an episode, Lance set out to make doughnuts in a motorboat while the entire team sweated away to finish a cabin project. Or fans might recall a time when he cozied up in a hammock to indulge in a bag of Cheetos. Lance was the definition of work hard but play hard too - with a personality meant for reality television. Lance was a core member amongst the unique team of professional constructors for three seasons. However, in season four, it all changed. Lance Gatcomb | Source: Facebook And of course, fans who appreciated his comedic side, like this fan who expressed his dismay on Twitter "He was always good for some good comedy relief," would very much like to know why Lance mysteriously disappeared. Unfortunately for fans, the American Television star has not commented on why he left the show. He has not revealed much about his personal or professional life after leaving Maine Cabin Masters. In addition, Lance's social media presence is almost non-existent. He does not own an Instagram or Twitter account and last posted on his Facebook Page ages ago - making it harder for fans to know his whereabouts since leaving the show. The once-popular television personality has not talked about leaving the show, probably because he seriously appreciates his new life away from the television industry and limelight. Well, it's safe to say that Lance may have gotten a lucky break, given that he left before the infamous Maine cabin masters lawsuit. The lawsuit came about when one of the construction companies featured on the show was sued for allegedly neglecting safety standards. The particular case involved the renovation of cabins built before 1978, the year before lead-based paint was prohibited in the USA for its effects on human health. In 2022, the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) ruled in favor of the plaintiff, forcing the Maine Cabin Masters crew to pay a $16,500 fine. You can read all about that story on Maine's News Center. Anyway, let's check out what happened to Lance and what he's been up to. Everyone who has tried to do a little snooping on Lance Gatcomb's personal life has not been able to reveal much. With the little information that's hidden in far-to-reach places, here's a brief look into Lance's personal life. Although not much is known about his family life, TV show cast reveals Lance's Mother's name is Pamela Gatcomb. His biological sister is named Elizabeth Anita Davis, and he has one step sister by the name of Crystal Perkins. An episode of Maine Cabin Masters gave viewers a peek into his marriage with wife Lily Gatcomb. In the episode titled A Cabin for the Pride, the expert cabin builder revealed he built the cabin the two had been staying in, and viewers got the impression the two heeded a great family life. When the episode was aired, there was no sign of children, but he may have had children after. Lance, who leads a private life, social media pages do not reveal much about him. Reviewing his Facebook page, fans are only given access to just about a couple of photos of him and his white sailboat. Although Lance's net worth has not been accounted for, die-hard fans of the show would know one cabin project would crop up profits of up to $30 000, and we assume the show compensated its cast member quite well for their work done. His exact salary per episode is not known. With his family life and professional life all extremely under the wraps, all we can hope for is that the former television personality is doing well, wherever he might be.