I'm sorry. I'm sorry.To complete the job, which means that they are much more safe when I use this tool). It works like a dream and it is easy to configure and maintain. This said, do not use the derived saw blade. I bought a blade with the end of the fine since I have been working with 1/2 -inch wide pieces, 1 1/2 inches for my project, but I thought I tried the blade that came first. It was good the first time I used it, but the second time, the first cut that I tried to shatter the piece of wood - and I mean in shattered. The piece substantially exploded, and even if I wore safety equipment, I was extremely lucky, did not send splinters in the neck, chest or lower jaw. One piece struck the left hand quite strong enough to think that my index finger had been broken and cut my hand quite well. I had absolutely no warning that would happen. The blade of the saw was correctly attached, my work space was set correctly and I had the wooden piece correctly positioned. I called a friend who makes the processing of professional wood and took a look at the saw. It turns out that the sega blade is scarcely produced. He helped me replace it with what I bought separately and now the saw works like a dream. Zero problems since then. I threw the original lama straight in the garbage. Was this worth it? Absolutely. I foresee years of service with this, and now I have replaced the blade, I am confident of how it works and my ability to use it. I replaced this system only if I ended up needing something larger or better, but I doubt it happens. The only warning, and I mean this absolutely, is that you should replace the blade of the saw that derives before starting any project. The standard blade is simply not sure to use: asulcni asulcni amal al icstititsos am ,otseuq atsiuqca etnemaruciS .iul noc odrocca'd onos ,onam al ottor isauq reva opoD .iam asu il non idniug ,ages id tik ien esulcni emal el noc imelborp otuva erpnes reva id otaligisnoc ah ehc ,ocima oim lad atatroppus ytpme ytpme trac gnippohs ruoYtraC gnippohS
